Intergenerational Connection Project

Looking for a way to connect with friends and family? Feeling inspired to spend more time outside? Let’s share our love of nature with each other through this intergenerational project!

1. Choose two people that you would like to connect with. If you really want it to be intergenerational, make sure these people are from a different generation than yourself.

2. Choose something in nature that your group is interested in. Do you enjoy bird watching? Do you want to know more about plants? Do you find listening to sounds in nature relaxing? Decide as a group a topic to focus your project on.

3. Choose a way to record your information. You could keep a nature journal (visit senecaparkzoo.org/zoo/projects for a copy of our natural journal), take photographs, or make a list of birds you see every day.

4. Choose how to share your information with the other people in your group. This could be writing letters or emails, a virtual meeting, or calling each other. Pick something that is easy and enjoyable for the members of your group.

5. Make a commitment to stay connected. Decide how often you will share your information and pick dates to reach out to each other.
